£5 per minute

Those of you who attend the regular sessions of the Air Yorkshire "Café Congress", at the Multiflight Café, may well have heard me extolling the virtues of flying in smaller propeller driven aeroplanes, in preference to being squeezed into the giant jets that fill our skies and dominate air travel today. Any opportunity to sample such flying is always welcome and a recent holiday to Jersey afforded just such an opportunity. On this occasion it was to fly from Jersey to Guernsey and back.

This route is currently operated by Blue Island (Flybe) using ATR 42/72 aircraft. A bit of forward planning meant that we found ourselves in a taxi travelling from our hotel in St Hellier to Jersey Airport, for the lunchtime flight, with tickets in our pockets and an afternoon in Guernsey to look forward too.

There was time for a coffee and a bit of spotting from the spacious 1st Floor departure lounge. This lounge affords excellent views of both the main apron and the cargo/business apron, but not the aero-club apron. Amongst the a/c to be seen were: West Atlantic ATP SE-MHG and B.733 G-JMCP, 9H-VCH Challenger, OO-KIN Citation Jet CJ3, G-VIPW Pa-31, G-LUEK C.182 etc.

On the main apron were ATRs in both the Blue Island scheme and the Flybe (G-ISLF and I) purple scheme. As we strolled along the corridor to our departure gate, my hope was that we would be travelling in the ATR in the Blue Island scheme and so it turned out. We quickly boarded ATR.42, G-ISLH, with our 15 or so fellow passengers and awaited departure. A study of the safety card was called for because it was my first ATR flight for eighteen years.

G-ISLH ATR 42

At that time of day there was little conflicting traffic and we were soon taxi-ing for line-up and take-off on R.26. With a satisfying roar the P&W engines announced our take-off and we were away, climbing out over the west coast beaches and turning north for Guernsey.

The distance to Guernsey is short and with take-off from Jersey on R.26 and landing at Guernsey on R.27, it is very short, so a chance for a record flight time. I clocked it at around eight minutes. So with the fare of £40, I make that £5 per minute. It was all at low level with accompanying stunning views, in delightful sunshine, culminating with an exhilarating side-slip at speed onto R.27 at Guernsey.

The Terminal at Guernsey looked very modern (2004) and we had enough time for a sandwich and coffee and some spotting, before we boarded a local bus for a run around the island. The Café on the 1st floor is land-side and spacious, with superb views across the Airport. It also has an eating area exclusively for adults, which was a novel but welcome feature.

Our bus around the Island brought back memories of a family holiday in 1982, but there had been many changes of course. We ended up back at the Airport for our return flight on the evening shuttle, using the same aircraft. Flight BE6426 was almost full and took 17 minutes, at a seemingly more leisurely pace, which meant that it was only £2.35 per minute (£40 divided by 17). Some would say it was a better deal than the outbound flight at £5 per minute!

Back in Jersey I was conscious that, as we walked across the apron, many of our fellow passengers were regulars, using this flight for commuting home from a day's work in Guernsey. My thought was, it certainly beats travelling in the West Yorkshire traffic gridlock bouncing from pot-hole to pot-hole.

I look forward to my next flight on an ATR 42/72 ..... it's the propellers, you know!

July 2018

Commentary

The Big news is that on 22nd August PTT aviation ceased trading at all 3 bases. July was another good month with 11 Netjets, 15 German visitors and a growing number of American and eastern European bizjets. The Irish Air Corps sent a PC-9A, the MOD sent us Typhoon, Hawks ( 2 of the Red Arrows) , Hercules and Puma . Once the residents and regulars are removed, there were 253 movements to report on versus 330 last month. Top O & D's (Origin and Destination) were Fairoaks, Luton, Palma, Faro and Le Bourget plus many new ones including Popham, Richmond-VA, Albany –NY, Salerno, Bogota, Plzen-Line (CZ) & Pardubice (CZ) plus Rijek and Brac in Croatia .
